Since Evelyn H. Lauder founded the Breast Cancer Research Foundation in 1993, we have become the world's largest private funder of breast cancer research. In its first year, BCRF supported eight scientists. Now—with your support—BCRF is fueling the work of more than 260 scientists in 15 countries, collaborating across disciplines and borders. We've driven game-changing improvements in every aspect of care—progress that can be measured in millions of survivors around the world.

As we look back on the last three decades, we're enormously proud of the advances we've made together leading to transformative improvements across the spectrum of care. From better strategies for prevention to new targeted therapies to landmark gains against metastasis, your investment has helped propel us to where we are today: a moment when survival rates are the highest they've ever been.

While we've made tremendous progress, as evidenced by the astounding 44 percent decline in breast cancer mortality over the last 30 years, incidence rates are on the rise worldwide and more young women are being diagnosed than ever before. We must accelerate research. Advances can't come fast enough—not for those currently living with breast cancer. Not for their loved ones. And not for us.

We're grateful for every gain we've made against breast cancer and for your tremendous partnership in this lifesaving work. Together we're accelerating the pace of discovery.
